

Contents

Acknowledgements	9
Introduction	11
1. Taking the fast track	11
2. Overview of aims and contents	13
1. Political discourse: approaches and perspectives	19
1. Political discourse as specialized discourse	19
2. Discourse communities and genres	20
3. Language and politics: a brief overview	23
4. Critical Discourse Analysis	27
5. Rhetoric	32
6. Pragmatics	37
7. Corpus Linguistics	40
2. Politics and media: gendered frames and stereotypes	45
1. Political communication and media discourse	45
2. The horse race: the front runner vs the underdog	49
3. Spin doctors and sound bites	51
4. Gender and the media: frames and stereotypes	54
5. The media and Hillary Clinton	58
6. Studies on the 2008 American presidential elections	61
3. Gender and language	65
1. Is the English language sexist?	65
2. Linguistic varieties across genders	72

3. A 'powerless language'?	78
4. Is male speech the norm?	80
5. 'Powerlessness' or 'self-determined strategy'?	82
6. Feminine rhetoric	84
4. Clinton and Thatcher: shrinking violets or iron ladies?	87
1. Women in politics: shattering the glass ceiling?	87
2. The use of personal pronouns	91
3. " Equal opportunities, equal pay and equal respect "	102
4. Journey, fight and sport: political metaphors	107
5. The metaphors of silence and of the weaker sex	111
6. Hedging devices and indirect language	113
7. Thatcher and Clinton's linguistic political style	121
5. Hillary Clinton's political rhetoric	125
1. Politics is conflict	125
2. Conflict as a political struggle	129
3. Conflict as a civil fight for human rights	134
4. Conflict as a military and armed warfare	140
5. Conflict as a struggle for peace	145
6. The foreign policy hawk	149
6. Hillary Clinton's media coverage	153
1. Personality traits and character analysis	153
2. The public vs the private realm	157
3. Lady Macbeth: metaphors of evil	161
4. The ultimate spinner: metaphors of animals	170
Conclusions	177
References	185